Correspondence Chicago Record: "Murdered by Indians" is now believed to be the explanation of the mysterious disappearance of a number of people on the Upper Laird river, and along what is known as the Edmontown route in the far northwest of Canada. Some time ago two Frenchmen named Florent and Collins set out upon the Ermonton trail, and were never heard from again by their friends until a clew was furnished by the Indians selling a quantity of furs which their friends recognized as having belonged to the Information was subsemissing men. quently obtained from other Indiana that the victims had been shot in their cabin and their bodies dropped through a hole in the ica.

A prospector named Charles Munroe, who went up into this country, and never returned, is firmly believed by his friends to have been murdered by Indians. Last winter during Christmas week two Indians reported that a boy had fallen through the ice and had been drowned. Later the body was found with the mark of an ax on the head.

Five young women belonging to a family who had gone up the Laird river to trap were murdered by Indians, and, strange to say, the inquiry into the case, which was instituted by the authorities was allowed to drop when it appeared that the young women had done away with because a jealous Indian woman had proclaimed them to be witches.

As a matter of fact, some of the distant Indian agents appear afraid of taking any judicial action to prevent or punish crime in their respective tricts whenever such action would con-stitute an interference with the absurd belief and superstitions of the Indians. A recent result of this policy has been the simple imprisonment of one Indian murdered for two months and the acquittal of another because of the inexorable law of the Wood Crees -the instant killing of so-called wehti-

The story of the killing is an inter esting example of one of the deeprooted beliefs and superstitions of these unfortunate people, and, better than a whole volume, shows up the devil worship and sorcery of the Crees. Napaysoosis, one of the accused, tells the following story of the crime:

"Last winter, a band of us, thirty-two in number, counting women and children, were living at the Bald Hills, some seventy-five miles west of the Lesser Slave lake. We lived in two shacks Entoominahoo, our chief, along with Kunuksoos and myself and our families, lived in one shack. Moostoos and his family, with some others, lived in the other shack, and the other Indians in the two tepees. We were all on the best of terms with one another, and Moostoos was especially liked by us.

"Some months before he was killed, Moostoos told several of us that he was afraid an evil spirit was getting the better of him, and that he turn wehitiko or cannibal, adding: "If I ever go wrong you had better kill me, as I do not wish to destroy my children."
"The time passed on, however, until about March 23. At that time some sickness was attacking the Indians, and two of them. Napaysis and the little man, were being treated by Entominahoo in his own shack, which might be called the hospital, as all the sick were taken there to be doctored. Entominahoo was chief medicine man. The third day before he was Moostoos also went there to join in the medicine making and sorceries, which were being practiced with a view to

"During the last day and night I saw Moostoos was not looking as usual. His eyes were rolling and glittering and he seemed afraid to look any one in the face, muttering to himself all the time. On one occasion he said: 'I look upon these children as young moose, and long to eat them."

"I was absent from the shack part of the day, and when I returned toward evening Moostoos looked wilder and more dangerous than ever, and it was clear to all present that he was becoming a webtiko. Ordinary incanta tions were tried, but without result, and as a last resort the medicine lodge was erected in the shack and the whole skill and power of all of our sorceries was enlisted in the attempt to bring Moostoos back to reason.

"It was certain from his appearance, words and actions that he had no bodfly complaint, but that he was possesed with a devil.

"Our usual ceremonles were begun The singing of medicine songs drumming and dancing were carried on from sundown until about midnight, and as Moostoos was lying covered with two blankets comparatively quiet, the medicine seemed to have a good effect. "There were in the house at that time Entominahoo and his wife, Eliza, the wife of Redhead, Felix's wife, Redhead, Kunuksoos and his wife, Napaysis and the 'little old man.' These last were lying sick. All but the sick men and Kunuksoos, who was taking care of them, were grouped around Moostoos, striving by medicine songs and other means at our command to drive the evil spirit out of him. Entominahoo, our chief doctor, was inside the medicine circle with his wand, and us-

"Suddenly Moostoos called out: "This night you will die,' and commenced twitching his limbs and rolling his eyes. Two of us, Chuckachuck and went and sat on each side of hm at his shoulders, prepared to hold him if he became violent, while the two young women, Eliza and Felix's wife, sat at his feet. Redhead, sick with fright, left the shack. Moostoos beo get up, saying again; 'If I get up I will kill you all to-night! Then four of us laid hold of his legs and arms and held him down, while Entominahou continued his medicine, using the most powerful songs and incantations at his mmand. Moostoos now became unmanageable, flung us off, rose to his feet and sprang into the air, exclaim-'I will kill you all! I will not leave ngr ne alive!"

Fear, intense, blind fear, took hold of us; we sumped up, and, in spite of his gigantic struggles, we managed to put him down and cover him with blankets. Entinamahoo left his medicine lodge, and sat down close to Moos toos, saying: 'It's no use; I can do no

"Moostoos struggled fearfully, throw ing his head about and grinding his teeth, and twice he tried to bite me, tenring my coat. At that time I was holding his right arm, Chuckachuck his left, while the two women held his feet. I covered his face after he tried to bite The noise of the drumming and singing had been going on all

"By this time we were crasy with fear, and what followed is like a dream. Eliza sprang to her feet, holding in her right hand a medicine belt and in her left an ax. Her hair was flying loose and she was dancing and singing. All of a sudden she ran around and struck Moostoos over the face and breast with this medicine belt several times, I cannot say if she struck him with the ax, as my head was bent down, but I saw blood outside the blanket after she had thrashed him, and I only knew of two other cuts on the head, while the policeman found three. She then handed the ax to Chuckachuck and said, 'Here, brother-in-law."

"Chuckachuck struck him with the ax and split his skull. That blow killed Moostoos. Chuckachuck then handed me the ax and knife, which I refused at first, till Chuckschuke called me a coward, and said I wanted them all killed. I then drove the knife into his belly and stuck the ax into his body over the heart, leaving both weapons in the wounds. Mocstoos breathed little after he got the first blow, but he had stopped breathing before I struck him.

"All that night we sat around the body till daylight by the light of the We expected him to rise from fire. the dead, and we wanted to kill him again if he tried to get up."

Being asked what he thought was the matter with Moostoos, Naypaysoosis replied: "He was a Wehtiko, and I know he had a lump of ice in his body causing the malady. strong tea, and poured it bolling hot into the ax hole in the breast to thaw that ice, but first Payoo and I drove a stake into that hole and through the body into the ground; then we pulled out the stake and poured in the hot

"After that, toward morning, Entominahoo's wife and I tied his legs with chains to two pickets driven into the ground, so that if he came to life again be could not get up and run after us. And last of all, next day I cut off his head with an ax and to make sure that he was dead, and in order that, even if he got up, he could not eat us. Then we left him in the shack, tied up the door and left the place."

Being requested to say what he meant by a Wehtiko, the prisoner explained that it was a person, man or malignant evil spirit, which incites him or her to kill and eat his or her fellow-men or women. A Wehtiko is possessed of superhuman strength and cunning. and the only thing that saves the Indlans is that it generally warns them beforehand of its coming state. He added that it has always been the Indian custom to kill these people; that being their only means of protecting themselves from their violence.

Money market prospects continued the dominant influence of the trading. The events of yesterday had turned nearly all the traders on the floor to the bull side and the market opened with an upward movement of prices, which extended to a large fraction on the average before a reactionary tendency developed. Buying by London helped on the advance and there were special strength in a number of individual stocks, notably in General Electric, which rose an extreme four points on rumors of an extra dividend, and Consolidated Gas, which was up at one time five points on a periodical rumor of a settlement of the local gas war. There was a continuance of the heavy absorption of Southern Pacific, which gave a healthy tone to the railroad list. Profit-taking saies in this stock were detected at an early period of the trading and had not a little to do with the case of the search of the profit and may to 71%c, both options having ease off a 10c lower. The market here railed after the only in a satisfactor in the weak march to first the only it market weak the only items that buils could confront the bearish array of statistics with Money market prospects continued the dominant influence of the trading. The detected at an early period of the trading and had not a little to do with checking the general upward tendency. The decisive influence in turning prices downwards was the realization that yesterday's easing of the money rate was due to a sporadic supply of funds e in the conditions of the money market. A large portion of the funds loaned yesterday were attributed to a cash de-posit by one of the railroads for the purpose of taking up an old underlying issue of bonds. This supply of money had the effect of setting the calling of loans for the banks made necessary by the depletion of reserves and prevented the stringency of the money market which had been feared. The effect was market manifest to-day, as well as yesterday, the rate for call loans not going above 7 per cent, and ruling generally below that. But the sterling exchange rate showed a quick response to this easing of the local money rate and moved an additional fraction upwards away from the gold import point. This caused a cessation of the talk of immediate gold imports, on which was based the upward movement of yesterday in stocks. Thus the hope of relief by an inward movement of gold had to be abandoned for the time. Meantime the absorption of funds by the sub-treasury and the probable continuance of demands from the interior have still to be reckoned with. Discouragement overcame the operators for a rise and they proceeded to sell out their holdings, wiping out the earlier gains and carrying prices below last night's level. Considerable speculative activity is diverted to the cotton market, where development of a foreign demand indicates the relinquishment by foreign buyers of their attitude of waiting for eral money situation it is important to note that the advices from the south report money in abundant supply there

o that operators have been able to obtain accommodations for holding their cotton for higher prices. The largely increased supply of cotton bills in the exchange market in the last few days with the movement in cotton will nat-urally result in the early release of lower prices. As bearing on the Hog market—Receipts were 9,645, against 13,620 last week. The demand was moderate for the lighter supply, Quotations were: Far western 24.70 to 4.75; other points 34.40 to 34.50; roughs 33.25 to 34; pigs 34.30 to 34.40.

Sheep and lambs—Receipts 25 carloads, or 3,457 head, against 5,444 last week. The market was demoralized on both sheep and lambs—Quotacons were: Sheep 34 to 34.75; most sales from $2 to 43.25; good lambs 34.50 to 34.90; common to fair 35.50 to 34.

Calves—Fair supply and lower; market dull. Sales were made from 5 to 7 centa.

NEW YORK—The weakness of the past week or more in the metal markets of this country and abroad was increased materially to-day. This was notably depressed, closing at the lowest level in months. Cable and telegraphic news was adverse to the market, leading to liberal offerings at lower quotations and conservatism on the part of buyers. At the close the metal exchange called pig from warrants easy, with March and April rated $15.50@ 15.75. Lake copper dull at $17. Tin easy, with $25.50 bild and $25.70 asked. Lead quiet, with $4.57% bild and $6.5% asked. Speiter dull, with $4.65 bild and $4.75 asked. The brokers' price for lead is $4.40, and for copper $17. Spelter dull, with $4 65 bid

Wool.

Wool.

BOSTON—There has been no change in the demand for wool during the past week and the sales have been heavy. Holders are firm in their view of higher prices and many are holding for an advance. Territory wools continue in good sales at 550%7c; scoured for fine medium and fine white 50%5c for strictly staple goods. Fleece wools continue in good demand and prices are hard and likely to go higher. Australian wools are limited and very little is being done. Prices are firm. Following are quotations for leading descriptions: Ohio and Pennsylvania fleeces—K and shove Hig52c; XX and XX and above 11673c; c. delaine 55@36c; No. 1 combing $5678c; No. 2 do 33@34c.
